Walnut

This captivating flooring boasts dark, deep, rich tones that are occasionally highlighted with small sprays of lighter wood. It's swirling patterns set off each plank, offering a rare and completely unique look. This hardwood creates a dynamic floor with warm ambiance that will last for generations.

Beech

Perhaps not as well-known as oak or maple flooring, beech is a wonderful species with a lot of appeal. It has an even blend of reddish brown heartwood and lighter colored sapwood. To complement its natural warmth, beech has a mostly closed, straight grain and a fine uniform texture which fits well in contemporary settings.

Red Oak - Rift & Quartered

Rift and quartered red oak has an elegant, straight grained appearance with beautiful figure, which sets it apart from the more common "cathedral grain" properties of plain sawn red oak. Its inherent qualities of stability and beauty place it in the premium company of hard maple, walnut and cherry. Rift and quartered sawn boards help to minimize the movement that occurs when wood reacts to the moisture and temperature changes that occur with the changing seasons.

White Oak - Rift & Quartered

The typical rift and quartered white oak has a more pronounced "ray fleck" than red oak, easily seen by the naked eye. Our rift and quartered boards are characterized by clean, straight grain patterns with beautiful figure. Rift and quartered sawn boards help to minimize the movement that occurs when wood reacts to the moisture and temperature changes that occur with the changing seasons.

Red Oak

Northern Red Oak has an attractive, well-defined grain pattern, and rich luxuriant color. This species is renowned for its toughness and durability. It makes a hardwood floor well-suited for commercial or residential high traffic areas.

White Oak

This species' brown undertones speak of a strong, clean look. It is mostly straight-grained with a medium to coarse texture, with longer rays than red oak, which gives it more figure. Sturdy and beautiful, White Oak has long been a traditional all-American floor.

Hard Maple

This extraordinarily hard species captivates the eye with its soft, consistent color tones and offers a clean, contemporary feel. The Northern Maple has a closed, subdued grain, a uniform texture and its rock-solid hardness creates floors that will withstand the tests of time and wear.

Yellow Birch

This wood offers striking color variation, ranging from its light colored sapwood to its earthy reddish brown heartwood. The species is generally straight-grained with a fine uniform texture, typically characterized by a plain and often curly or wavy pattern. Similar to maple, it is hard and strong, making it a good choice for high-traffic areas.

Red Birch

The red birch is a very unique floor. Because it uses the heartwood of yellow birch, there are limited grades, but those few offer sheer beauty. The wood is typically straight-grained with a fine uniform texture and occasional curly grain flourishes or wavy figuring. It is a heavy, hard and very durable floor.

Ash

This beautifully grained wood is known for its hardness. It is generally light to medium toned in color, richly grained and has a coarse uniform texture. Traditionally, the strength of Ash wood has made it the choice for baseball bats, but it also offers superior stability and beautiful character to flooring applications.

Cherry

The luxurious tones of cherry are unparalleled in northern hardwood species. Its rich reds and browns deepen beautifully with age and feature a fine and frequently wavy grain pattern with a uniform satin-like texture. It has served for centuries as a hard, durable flooring material with warm beauty.
